Forget the Band – Aid Approach, Taking a Holistic Approach to Serve the Child

This presentation will include current topics administrators and school teachers need to know including the legal and practical guidance on recognizing and establishing the boundaries between the schools responsibility to educate and the parent’s right to raise, educating trauma survivors, balancing the rights and responsibilities of students discipline, the use of law enforcement in the educational environment, over – identification/mis-identification of students, and addressing a student’s needs when community and medical resources are insufficient.

Geneva Jones

Geneva Jones is a nationally recognized public speaker, media commentator, and trainer on all things education law, in addition to her work as a school law lawyer. She speaks frequently on the topics of special education, student discipline, student privacy, and equitable education for socio-economically disadvantaged students.

Geneva explains the law in simple, common-sense language, illustrated with frequent examples from real-world experiences, and she focuses on the legal framework's everyday implications, emphasizing compliance through awareness and planning. Her trainings and speeches keep her audiences entertained, inspired, and engaged at all times.

Geneva creates a truly individualized learning experience by tailoring every engagement to the needs of her audience. She has shared her insights with thousands of people throughout the United States, and all speaking engagements provide a potent dose of realism and inspiration. Geneva’s style is fun, fast-paced, and, most importantly, actionable.
